

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

RS20301

This legislation strengthens Idaho's existing anti-bullying laws by ensuring that districts, schools, and school personnel have a role in preventing and intervening in bullying should it occur.

At present Idaho's anti-bullying law is solely punitive, providing that an offense "may" be an infraction.

Under the proposed legislation, standard language relating to the commission of an infraction is added, removing "may" and leaving it to the courts to determine whether and individual student has in fact violated the provisions of this section of law. Additionally a third offense would be a misdemeanor, providing schools more tools for addressing repeat offenders and those for whom school resources and intervention are not successful. Protection for students who support those who face bullying has also been included in this section.

The legislation specifies a role for school superintendents and principals in informing staff, parents and students through student hand books and other means that bullying is prohibited and to convey to students, staff and parents what constitutes bullying to further ensure all are aware of school district policy.

It is the intent of this legislation to make it clear that school personnel are authorized and expected to intervene where they see incidents of bullying to further prevent harm to students and ensure all parties recognize bullying, harassment and intimidation when it occurs.

Finally, the legislation provides for inclusion of anti-bullying content in district, teacher and staff training and orientations to help staff recognize and most appropriately intervene should any of the many types of bullying occur.

FISCAL NOTE

It is anticipated that this legislation will not increase the cost to the State's General Fund as it is expected that the statute will be carried out within the existing framework of the State Department of Education and In-Service Trainings that occur in the school districts.

Contact:

Name: Senator Shawn Keough

Office:

Phone: (208) 332-1321